BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
Marion Star Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Spurred into feverish activity by the storm of violent criticism over the way prohibition is being enforced, every branch of the government was moving today toward a radical shakeup in the system designed to get results and to quiet the furor.

The developments were these:

1. The treasury has suddenly become "hard-boiled" in the matter of rum-running enforcement.

2. A reduction of 15 per cent has been ordered by the treasury in the production of industrial alcohol for 1930.

3. The department of justice has decided to take two highly important questions to the supreme court for determination.

4. Congress is getting ready to order the transfer of enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice.

5. The national capital itself is to be made the experimental guinea pig of enforcement.

6. The prohibition bureau is to be reorganized.

PROBE $3,000 CAPITOL FIRE

House Document and Artist
Model Rooms Gutted by Blaze

AWAIT MAN'S RECOVERY

Artist Taken from Smoke-
Filled Room Unconscious
During Blaze

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Official investigation into the fire which threatened the U. S. capitol last night failed to throw much light today on the cause of the blaze.

It was determined, however, that the blaze started in the model room of Charles Moberly, 41-year-old artist, who was carried out of the smoke-filled room partly unconscious and talking incoherently.

David Lynn, civil architect, in charge of the investigation announced today that Moberly had admitted taking "couple of drinks" yesterday, but denied that he was intoxicated.

Close examination of the electric wiring showed that it was in perfect order and that probable cause was thus eliminated.

The blaze may have been started by an oil lamp used by the painter, Lynn said. The room was usually thrown into a fireplace and wetted down to prevent fire, but a carelessly tossed match or cigar may have been dropped into it and caught.

The distance to the model room and a portion of the house document room is small, and will not reach over $3,000.

OFFICIALS CONDEMN COUNTY DAIRY HERD

17 Milk Cows Valued at $200 Each Found To Be
T B Reactors

The entire dairy herd of the Marion County house has been condemned by state officials now conducting the tuberculosis test in Marion county.

Seventeen milk cows valued at $200 each are included in the condemned cattle. Besides these there are a number of younger cattle.

Practically the entire herd was found to react to the tuberculosis test conducted by the state officials.

M. A. Porter, superintendent of the county house, stated today that all cattle on the house farm would be disposed of immediately.

After the house farm has been fumigated the herd will be rebuilt from cattle found to be non-reactive to the tuberculosis test.

Porter stated today that a number of the younger cattle owned by the house did not react to the test. These, however, will also be disposed of in order to avoid the chances of their later developing tuberculosis symptoms which might contaminate the new herd.

The body will be removed from the W. C. Boyd funeral home this afternoon, and may be viewed at the home.

YEAR'S BUS CRASH TOLL 28 LIVES

Three major bus smashups on Ohio's main highways have taken a toll of at least 28 lives within the last year.

Two of these crashes—the one at Wooster last night in which the lives of seven school children were cut short, and one at Eaton Thursday in which two persons were killed—have occurred within the last three days, bringing the total of bus crashes for the week to three.

Strangely enough, an evil and warning echo of the Bellevue disaster, just a few hours before the Wooster disaster, when a bus skidded on slippery roads and plunged into a ditch after having been struck by a freight truck, took place at the Bellevue crash.

YOUNG PEOPLE RETURNING FROM GAME

Driver Declares He Remembers Shifting Gears; Believe High Wind May Have Prevented Him from Hearing Whistle of Train

WOOSTER, Jan. 4.—Plans for a grand jury probe of the tragedy which resulted in the death of seven high school boys and the injuring of nine others when a Pennsylvania flyer hit a bus at Shreve, near here, last night, were announced this afternoon by Prosecuting Attorney Marion Graven.

Three eyewitnesses to the accident today informed the probe, color that the bus did not come to a full stop at the crossing.

Graven stated the scene of the tragedy today.

WOOSTER, Jan. 4.—The joy at a basketball victory turned to deepest sorrow at the village of Wooster, where today, as it prepared to bury seven of its young boys, who were instantly killed late last night when the bus in which they were riding was struck by a fast Pennsylvania train at the Shreve crossing, near here. Nine other children were seriously injured in the accident.

First reports of the tragedy said that it occurred during a steel storm. These were proved to be unfounded today, however, when investigating officials found that the crossing was perfectly dry.

A high wind was tearing through the countryside at the time, however, and it may have prevented the driver of the bus from hearing the whistle of the train while the crossing warning bells.

Had the Mangled
All of the bodies were badly mangled and identification was not made until today.

The dead are:
Willard Baker, 14.
Claude Repp, 16.
Forest Grubb, 17.
Wilbur Grubb, 16, Forest's brother.
Wayne Lechman, 15.
Earl Tinkle, 16.
Eugene Talley, 17.

At Wooster, these white-faced fathers and mothers were forced to view the mangled bodies of the dead to determine whether their children's names should be added to the death list.

Two brothers, Forest and Wilbur Grubb, aged 17 and 16, are among the dead.

It is expected that basketball will be discontinued at the local high school this year out of respect for the dead players. Maurice Leach, the coach, was one of the injured.

The dead youths were the victims of the "younger set" here. Five of them played on the high school basketball team. They were returning home to tell their parents that they had scored a 26-to-22 victory over Big Prairie High school last night, but they did not reach their homes.

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

NINETEEN THIRTY will be a year for automobiles and the year will end the year looking like a new car.

U. S. Bureau of General Motors has described a new type of Detroit, with more efficient shock absorbers, new Fisher bodies, bigger tires, bigger fully insulated, greater horsepower and smaller prices.

Automobile industry leads all other industries in improvement of quality performance and reduction of cost.

Last year Chevrolet sold more than a million three hundred thousand new cars.

Not every man prospers, but it is not true, one thing is a fact to double the value of your car and double self-protection, that is, having a new car.

The San Francisco Examiner says it is the type across the page, "San Francisco Women's Hips Largest."

So much the better for San Francisco and the future generation.

A woman built like a wooden lath is all right for Ziegfeld's Follies, well built to stand through a picket fence.

The members of great men, from Charlemagne to Lincoln, from Alexander the Great, to Napoleon, who danced with stakes wrapped around her, no matter clothing, to the mother of Roman, with good peasant blood, you will find her hips, something substantial, not an osteological anatomical specimen of pelvic depression.

WALL STREET put its sore shoulder to the wheel of 1930 with favorable energy yesterday. In accordance with Secretary Mellon's prediction, money was "easy" and the market finished with a brisk rise in price.

Some worry because gold is going abroad: $7,250,000 will be shipped to France on the Benares today, making a total shipment of $103,000,000 and for the month.

New Year, New Cars Ladies with Wide Hips France Gets the Gold We're All Richer

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

You admire French financiers when you hear that they got $90,000,000 of that gold.

How do the French do it? They work and they save.

As your debts diminish you automatically become richer. The people of the United States became richer by about a thousand million dollars during 1929.

Mr. Mellon's statement shows that in twelve months the national debt has been reduced by one billion and nine million dollars.

If Uncle Sam collected his foreign debts as efficiently as he collects from taxpayers at home we'd be clear of debt soon.

In Germany Mennonite refugees from Russia, accompanied with their children, are stricken with a strange disease. Forty children died in a few hours. Many were sacrificed because their mothers hid them from doctors, following a Mennonite custom of substituting "prayer for medical attention."

That method no longer works. "Know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" includes scientific medical truth.

The son of Italy's king will soon be married, and $500,000 will be freed from prison, by way of celebration.

What seems strange in America is a custom old in Europe.

After Admiral Nelson brought his ship into the Bay of Naples, promising to protect the King and Queen and their court against the power of the French revolution, many convicts were sent free to celebrate.

Admiral Kings, on mounting the deck, have often emptied prisons as a sign of joy.

CONGRESS RETURNS TO DUTIES MONDAY

Six or Seven Months of Legislative Activity Before House and Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Prohibition, tariff and railroad consolidation legislation occupied the headlines today on the return of congress from its holiday vacation.

When the house and senate reconvene Monday, they will face six or seven months of legislative activity. They will have to deal with the prohibition problem, with its intricate and highly technical issues, and with the railroad consolidation question, and pass upon a dozen other equally important bills.

The annual supply bill, carrying about $4,500,000,000 to finance the government next year, must be passed today, the house having passed only two thirds for and the senate having acted on none.

The prohibition bill, which will come to the fore when the treasury appropriation bill is considered, since it carries the funds for the prohibition unit, the coast guard and the border patrol, all intimately identified with prohibition enforcement.

This Plan of Letting Christmas Go By Default Good Idea, Will Claims After Reviewing Yule Situation

Santa Claus Only Fools the Old Folks: Kids Are Too Wise

BY WILL ROGERS
We all know it is just what I want to see in the papers. Well let's see what the "Blather about" the kids and New Years. These kids are too wise to have it on their minds. But a good Jew has a good Jewish idea. Let's let our Christmas go by default. Let's let our Christmas go by default. Let's let our Christmas go by default.

He will bounce his empty nursing bottle off your head and give it to folks that don't understand why you was so half-witted as to get that particular object. It was the last thing on earth they would want.

In fact we ourselves have gotten so wise that even when we are buying it for them we know it won't suit, but the etiquette of Christmas tells us that we must get them something. Of course the whole thing started in a fine spirit. It was to give happiness to the young, and another holiday to the old, so it was relished by practically everybody. It was a great day, the presents were inexpensive and received with much joy and gratification, and it was a pleasure to see the innocent little souls as they rushed down to the big room with the fireplace on Christmas morning in their bare feet, and generally the back end of their little sleepers unbuttoned and a-dragging. They remembered where they had hung their stockings,

Simple Gifts of Yesteryear Are No Longer Appropriate

Five cent Cigars practically ended your friendship with a Male friend for the coming year. Then they talk about Civilization. Say there ain't no civilization where there ain't no satisfaction, and that's what the trouble now, nobody is satisfied.

In the old days where a nice crayon picture could be just the thing as a present, why now an unborn Lamb would be unacceptable. They would wonder why you didn't send Mink.

And a Wife, why she will sneeze at a Buick! If she don't find a new Cord Auto in half short week why you will be the cheapest husband she ever had.

The whole prospectus of the thing has changed. We not only don't believe in Santa Claus, we don't believe in anything, and the kids say they don't care anything about a "Train that will run if you wind it up."

They want an Aeroplane that will fly, and Nip'll wound up either. You start talking about sending them a ten-cent horn that will blow and they want a Saxophone that will annoy, and as for a Cap Pistol and a dozen boxes of caps, why say, he wants a machine gun. He has read about Chicago. A Football? He is it regulation? If it is not, you are wasting your time giving it. They know better than you do. If it is a Girl Baby and you are sending some pink Sachet Powder you are all wet again. The "Sho" infant will rise up and demand an overnight bag, some Nose paint, and a lip stick, and when they get it they will examine the brand.

Always Dreaded

So you just wonder sometimes if the ones who want to abolish Christmas are not about half right. Everybody faces it with "Oh my goodness, Christmas is coming, and how I dread it!" Then you decide "The whole thing is the bunk I will just send cards." Then about three days before Christmas you commence to get a few little boxes and rememberances from alleged friends, and you say "I can't do this, I have to return something." Then out you go at the last minute to round up some tokens for friends who in your heart you curse for sending you anything, so the whole thing is an uproar from about Thanksgiving on.

In fact that's what they have Thanksgiving for, its your last day of peace for that year. I sometimes think some bright merchants are not really taking advantage of their opportunities.

Suppose along about a day of so after Christmas, the merchant went to each house and said, "Now this is confidential, but what did you get for Christmas that you don't want and what do you want in cash for it?" They buy it in for ten cents on the dollar, they hold it over and sell it to some sump the next Christmas, and you are ten percent ahead. But any how its worth thinking about, this doing away with it. It would be all right if we could again believe in Santa Claus. But our smartness had defeated our own happiness.

Today

- Chevrolet announces

CHEVROLET

IN CHEVROLET HISTORY

Today, Chevrolet presents the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History—a smoother, faster, better Six—with beautiful new bodies by Fisher.

Basically, it is the same sturdy, substantial Six which won such tremendous popularity in 1929. But it is a greater car in every way—for there are scores of vital improvements which contribute to comfort, performance, endurance and safety!

An Improved six-cylinder valve-in-head motor, with its capacity increased to 50 horsepower; four Delco-Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers; fully-enclosed internal-expanding weather-proof brakes; a new dash gasoline gauge; heavier and stronger rear axle; new Fisher non-glare windshield; larger tires—

—these are typical of the many improvements which make this car the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History.

But most impressive of all—this smoother, faster, better Six has been made available—

- at greatly reduced prices!

During 1929, more than a million three hundred thousand persons bought six-cylinder Chevrolets. This enormous volume has made possible many savings in the Chevrolet factories—and, in keeping with its long-established policy, Chevrolet is sharing these savings with the public. No written description can do justice to the extra value and quality provided in this new car. Visit your Chevrolet dealer—see this car—ride in it—and judge for yourself its sensational value.

SHE WANTED TO GUIDE HIS EVERY THOUGHT

BY PAUL HERVEY FOX

INSTALLMENT XXVII
CAPTAIN JONES fished the letter from his pocket. Kathleen sat up and began to read. She had read through a paragraph before she realized that the letter was not for her, and by this time she didn't care. She read every word with attention, and when she had finished she looked at the other envelope and found that it was the same. She murmured: "It is a shorter note to her, but it is the same."

For some minutes she sat, there, looking hard. She knew everything but she understood things which she had not previously been able to. Of course she had realized that the drive-up that day was nothing between Bruce and Suzanne. But she had never been able to understand what had caused them to go away together. If Bruce had dated with Suzanne, she wondered why he didn't continue and this had been puzzling her. Now she knew and she was satisfied.

There crossed her face presently a special smile which she had for anything that touched her. Poor Tom! How helplessly he had poured his heart out! How good he was!

And yet he was a man. Though she didn't sympathize with Suzanne in her rigorous exclusion of all his interests except herself, nevertheless Kathleen was swayed by a certain unconscious loyalty. And as for Bruce—she pursed her lips and nodded to herself. But there was a certain tenderness in her humorous eyes.

Captain Jones still fussed about his engine. "When will you be starting back, Captain?" she asked.

"Soon as I get this plaguey thing together again."

"I want to go with you. Just wait till I go up to the house and change my things."

She returned to find the house still empty. She listened, but she could not hear Bruce's axe ringing through the woods now. Hastily she transferred the two letters. Though the flap of the envelope addressed to Bruce was unbroken, the muffled was of course dry. Going into the kitchen, she mixed a little flour and water paste, and fastened the flap back.

She got into a tweed traveling dress and put on a hat for the first time since she had been on the island. As she started for the door Bruce came up the path. She handed him the letter to him. He took it without even glancing at it, his eyes fixed on hers. He looked startled.

"You're not going away?" he blurted out in a voice which did not sound like his.

His distress was obvious. She shook her head, while a sense of stifling pleasure ran through her.

"Just to the mainland to do some shopping."

"You'll come back?" he demanded, still with anxiety in his face.

"I'd hardly run off from Suzanne without telling her," she murmured and started for the door.

It was a rough voyage. Had there been much more of it she would have felt queasy, if not sick. She was glad to get out on Captain Jones' rickety pier, though the land looked a little to her disturbed eyes.

"It was just two, she noticed. 'I'll wait to go back in the afternoon,' she said to the Captain.

He squinted an eye at the water. "Wait till about five and she'll be like glass."

Madge Uses Diplomacy and Breaks Down Frederick's Defense

I WAS careful to invest my voice with friendliness and to smile genially at Frederick as I put the question to him concerning his wish to break up Junior's railroad cars. So far my interview with him had been unsatisfactory. He was in a rebellious mood and I was afraid that he did not trust my fairness. Yet I had to convince him of his own prejudice before I could proceed to the adjustment of his quarrel with Junior.

He reddened to his ears when I asked him what he expected me to say, and jerked his head in defiant fashion.

"I suppose you'll say I am a humbug," he said at last a bit shamefacedly. "But, honest, his cars were not big ones like mine, and they were awful old, and it would have made 'em look lots better, honest it would. It would have been a dandy bus, only Junior was so blasted snooty he couldn't see it."

There was no anger in his voice now, only a vast regret, and in his face I saw the creative look which to any discerning parent or teacher is something to be hailed with joy and cherished with care. There was actual mental hunger in the look, and I surprised that Harriet and Edwin Brathwaite, totally unused to children, had not realized the child's need.

Suddenly I saw the way out of all difficulties with this youngest and most tractable of the Harrison boys. "You are at Aunt Harriet's, have you a workshop where you can make things?"

His figure straightened and stiffened, and his eyes were suddenly alive.

"Workshop?" he repeated. Then he slumped into his former position. "Now, I haven't any workshop. I have got a tool-box"—there was infinite contentment in his tone—"but the tools are no good—they're all silver stuff. But Aunt Harriet is afraid I'll hurt myself with real ones."

My problem had dissolved into thin air. There remained simply a small boy, with nerves frayed to the breaking point. I leaned over and pulled him, half resisting half yielding into my arms and cuddled him as I do Junior.

Eager to Confess
"This is where Junior cries things out, Frederick," I said softly, trying to ease my embarrassment he might feel. But the boy was beyond any thing save the expression of his feelings in emotions, and he sobbed and shook and clung frantically to me until I began to be a little frightened at the result of my experiment. But just as I had made up my mind to halt his sobbing by any means available, they began to lessen in violence, and soon only the long shuddering breaths which

"O I won't be that long even."

She turned her steps to the quiet, bare, and explained what she wanted. Soon she was in a bleak white room, waiting for long distance to call back.

"Hello—hello," she said loudly. "Hello," said Tom Davies in New York. "Who is this—Kathleen—is this Kathleen? . . . What's happened?"

"Nothing—nothing at all, Tom. Can you hear me? I'm just being extravagant because I don't know what else to do with all my money. Just wanted to hear your voice."

"Did you get my letter?"

"Oh, yes, I got your letter." "Tom, will you tell father I'm all right? I meant to write to him, but I've put it off."

There was a pause, she heard his voice once more, less controlled this time.

"How—how is Suzanne?" "O, fine! She was upset at first. But then she and Bruce sat up all one night talking. And since then they've both been quite happy."

"What?" "They're both quite happy now—different from when they started. I see so little of them now because they're always together. . . . Hello, hello! Tom!" But the connection had been cut off, and she couldn't get him back.

Inside the office of the Galbraith Linoleum Co. Old Man Galbraith was at that moment engaged in giving a pointless lecture to his subordinate son.

"I'll pay your bills this time, but it's the last time, Joe. The trouble with you is you've been spending your money all over the place. You've got to be steady, keep regular hours, not come into the office any old time of day."

Joe listened patiently, waiting for his father's checkbook to end a lecture, the details of which were already familiar to him. But this time the lecture included an example.

"Why I'd sooner trust the business to your friend, Patsie, there, and let him pay you a percentage. He has his heart in his work. Never misses an hour—or comes to me for a vacation, or slights his job. In fact—"

The door of Mr. Galbraith's office was rudely pushed open. A young man with milky staring eyes, a flushed face, and hands he did seem to know what to do with, came in like a cyclone.

"Mr. Galbraith, I've got to leave town right away! I—this is very important!"

"But that Pensioner order—I was coming on you!"

"Can't help it, sir. I've got to go!" "Very well—if you leave to Mr. Davies, you have to!" Old Man Galbraith's tone was not too cordial.

"When are you leaving by the way?" "But he was not supposed to. Tom had left already."

The launch was plowing its way through calm waters. Though it was not yet five, Captain Jones' production had been covered as to the weather. Kathleen, sitting in the bow of the small boat, looked towards the island upon her, looked towards the island where the windless was.

She had assembled her time in business fashion after her long distance call to Tom. She had lunched at length in the hotel, bought a spool of thread and all available papers, inspected the town library and the oldest church.

She was a little thoughtful about that phone call. She realized that Tom must be lonely enough to imagine anything. The distress in the letter she had accidentally received had been so evident.

Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Uses Diplomacy and Breaks Down Frederick's Defense

I WAS careful to invest my voice with friendliness and to smile genially at Frederick as I put the question to him concerning his wish to break up Junior's railroad cars. So far my interview with him had been unsatisfactory. He was in a rebellious mood and I was afraid that he did not trust my fairness. Yet I had to convince him of his own prejudice before I could proceed to the adjustment of his quarrel with Junior.

He reddened to his ears when I asked him what he expected me to say, and jerked his head in defiant fashion.

"I suppose you'll say I am a humbug," he said at last a bit shamefacedly. "But, honest, his cars were not big ones like mine, and they were awful old, and it would have made 'em look lots better, honest it would. It would have been a dandy bus, only Junior was so blasted snooty he couldn't see it."

There was no anger in his voice now, only a vast regret, and in his face I saw the creative look which to any discerning parent or teacher is something to be hailed with joy and cherished with care. There was actual mental hunger in the look, and I surprised that Harriet and Edwin Brathwaite, totally unused to children, had not realized the child's need.

Suddenly I saw the way out of all difficulties with this youngest and most tractable of the Harrison boys. "You are at Aunt Harriet's, have you a workshop where you can make things?"

His figure straightened and stiffened, and his eyes were suddenly alive.

"Workshop?" he repeated. Then he slumped into his former position. "Now, I haven't any workshop. I have got a tool-box"—there was infinite contentment in his tone—"but the tools are no good—they're all silver stuff. But Aunt Harriet is afraid I'll hurt myself with real ones."

My problem had dissolved into thin air. There remained simply a small boy, with nerves frayed to the breaking point. I leaned over and pulled him, half resisting half yielding into my arms and cuddled him as I do Junior.

Eager to Confess
"This is where Junior cries things out, Frederick," I said softly, trying to ease my embarrassment he might feel. But the boy was beyond any thing save the expression of his feelings in emotions, and he sobbed and shook and clung frantically to me until I began to be a little frightened at the result of my experiment. But just as I had made up my mind to halt his sobbing by any means available, they began to lessen in violence, and soon only the long shuddering breaths which followed a fit of sobbing were all that told me the inert figure in my arms was not asleep.

"Aunt Margaret!" The plaintive voice was almost a whisper. "Yes, dear."

"I—I want to tell you something."

I tightened my clasp a bit for I guessed what was coming.

"What is it, Frederick?" I encouraged as he hesitated.

"Junior wasn't to blame at all in that scrap we had," he said, the words tumbling over themselves in his eagerness for confession. "I told him I wanted to make the bus, and he said I couldn't, and we argued, and I called him names, and we argued, and then I snatched the cars and was going to tear them apart, and Junior snatched them back, and then I hit him. Of course, he had to hit me back."

His voice ran down while I reflected with smiling amusement that Frederick's confession was far too sweeping to be entirely truthful. I knew my own small boy's violent temper when he feels that he is the victim of injustice, and was sure that he was not the gentle martyr which Frederick's word picture had made him. But the boy was speaking again, and I bent my head to catch the words.

"So, if you're going to lick anybody, I'm the one that ought to get it," he said.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDH MORTIMER LEWIS

TOMORROW will be Sunday and then it will be like we had never had a vacation, for my aunt will wash my face and neck and ears and then I will go to school the next day and Jubilee will come home and hide in the barn where it is warm, or so they call it till school goes out. I bet that lady won't let Nibs or any one else steal him or anything again. What she came near getting for that was just. I would hate to want any one's dog so bad that I would be willing to steal it. But if Jubilee was someone else's dog I bet I would want him that bad.

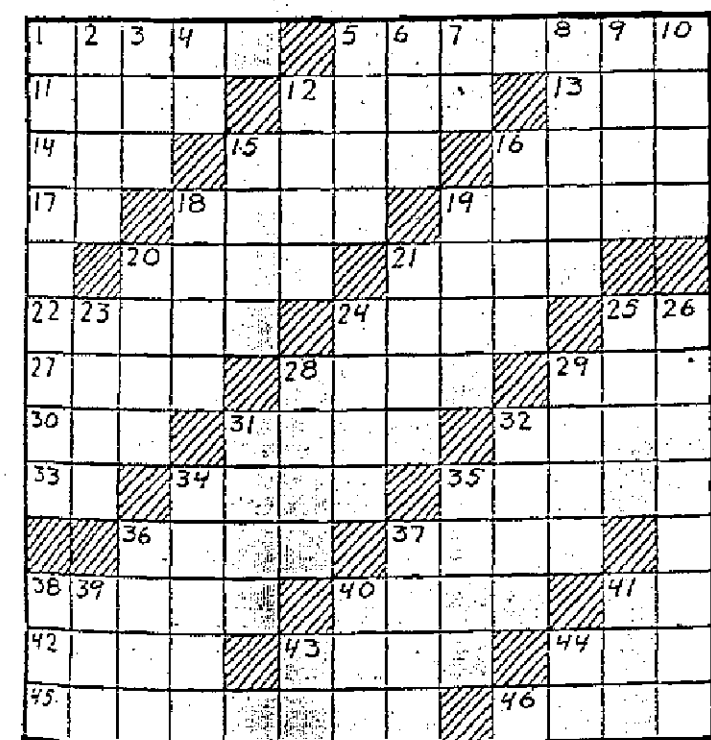

The bunch came whistling we were on our breakfast, and they went chattering around the house, and then all at once they were quiet upstairs and I thought they were probably doing something to my bed, but then all at once the stair door opened and there was the funniest somebody standing there looking at us. I ever saw, and my mother kinda gasped and my grandfather said something that was more like a cry than anything I ever heard him say. And it was Jubilee, and she had on a red dress with big puffed sleeves and a high collar and a shiny little waist, and it reached close to her feet, and she came out into the dining room and munched around the table, and my aunt told her she looked adorable, and my grandfather got up and went stumping away to his room, and I looked at my mother and tears were on her cheeks, and all at once Jubilee had her arms around my mother's neck and was crying too, and my father and uncle sat in their coats and skunk out to work, and then I found out that it was my grandfather's dress, and she was my grandfather's wife, and she was dead. And then I went on up to my room and peeked in my grandfather's room and he was lying on his bed over near the wall, and I thought he was asleep till I saw his shoulders move, and then I got on the bed and laid down by him and put my arm around his neck and laid there with my face in the pillow and not saying anything, and pretty soon I felt the bed kinda tremble and another arm go around his neck and I lifted my head up like a mud turtle's and you-aiss had come in and was on the other side of him. We stayed quite a while. And when we went out my grandfather didn't get up. Jubilee had taken off my grandmother's dress and she had her arm around my mother and my mother was smiling, and then Jubilee said, "I know what's the matter with me. I'm too dumb smart." I never had heard a girl swear before. It certainly sounded strange. I hope I will never hear one again.

My grandfather didn't stay in bed all day. He had to get up for his pipe or a chew of tobacco, but my mother said it had been quite a shot to him. It is funny to think my grandmother was not any bigger than Jubilee.
